LOCATION DESCRIPTION

The Northeast Waterfront Historic District contains warehouses that were in continuous industrial use from the Gold Rush to the mid 1960s. Since then, office and retail uses have been integrated into renovated warehouse structures. The area clearly serves as a visual reminder of San Francisco's earlier maritime warehousing commerce. It contains many of the surviving commercial buildings from the 1850s and 1860s. Nearby Jackson Square is currently largely used for mercantile and financial purposes, consulates, and offices with an abundance of art and antique shops littered throughout. The historic Waterfront submarket attracts multiple tenant profiles including, but not limited to, venture capital firms, tech companies, financial firms, high-end retailers, restaurants, and multiple world-renowned law firms. Surrounding neighborhood uses are office, retail, and flex buildings with ground floor commercial. The rental and sales markets in the neighborhood have high rents and sales prices.
